EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Maryland General Assembly passed the Maryland Workplace Fraud Act of 2009 with bipartisan support with a goal to protect workers and level the playing field for law-abiding business owners. The Maryland Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation was charged with implementing the law, and the legislation established the Maryland Workplace Fraud Unit – an investigative unit in the Maryland Department of Labor’s Division of Labor and Industry. Governor Martin O’Malley also established a Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud (Task Force) to coordinate enforcement efforts with the appropriate state agencies, facilitate data and information sharing, and increase awareness about workplace fraud.

Workplace fraud – the knowing misclassification or non-reporting of employees – has been a concern for Maryland workers and employers for generations. Maryland first took action in 1942 when the General Assembly enacted legislation protecting the employee-employer relationship. Still, some employers continue to knowingly misclassify employees in an attempt to bolster their bottom line. Workplace fraud cheats employees out of overtime wages, workers’ compensation benefits and unemployment insurance. It cheats taxpayers. And it cheats honest business owners who are forced to compete against lower bids from competing companies that are knowingly skirting the law. Maryland data shows that approximately 20 percent of audited employers misclassify employees as independent contractors. A federal study shows that as many as three out of 10 employers misclassified employees as independent contractors. Finally, workplace fraud costs the taxpayers millions of dollars in tax revenues that could be used for the benefit of the state.

During this challenging economy, state, local and federal governments must support creative initiatives to bolster job creation and improve the skills of our workforce. Government agencies also have an obligation to protect a safety net for workers and maintain a level playing field for business owners that compete within the law. The Maryland Workplace Fraud Act protects working families and stands up for honest business owners. When more businesses pay their fair share of taxes, everyone benefits – workers are protected and Marylanders have lower taxes.

Maryland’s Task Force consists of the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation, including the Commissioner of Labor and Industry and the Assistant Secretary for the Division of Unemployment Insurance; the Attorney General; the Comptroller; the Workers' Compensation Commission; and the Maryland Insurance Administration. In 2014, the Task Force conducted five (5) joint investigations in which one or more member agencies participated.

Among other things, since 2009, the Task Force has:

- Established three workgroups to focus on enforcement, data sharing, and communications;
- Coordinated information sharing procedures and the signing of necessary memoranda of understanding to make this inter-agency information sharing possible;
- Established a website and phone number for complaints;
- Conducted extensive outreach to professionals and employers impacted by the Workplace Fraud Act;
- Studied best practices employed by task forces working on these issues in other states;
- Assisted New York State with a multi-state workplace fraud prosecution;
- Created an internal website to facilitate data sharing among agencies;
- Partnered with federal agencies, including the Internal Revenue Service and the U.S. Department of Labor, to share information and coordinate law enforcement efforts related to reducing misclassification of employees by businesses in order to avoid providing employment protections;
- Participated in stakeholder meetings hosted by the Maryland Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation to discuss workplace fraud, best practices and procedures and possible changes to the Workplace Fraud Act; and
- Successfully amended the Workplace Fraud Act while maintaining protections for workers by allowing an employer to demonstrate an employer-independent contractor relationship.
- Implemented "Notice to Independent Contractors and Exempt Persons" which requires companies to notify workers regarding the expectations and responsibilities of being "independent contractors" in Maryland. The notice is available on DLLR's website for companies to download and post in their workplaces.
- Partnered with the Maryland Home Improvement Commission to share information with licensees about workplace fraud, misclassification of employees and how to be in compliance with federal and state insurance and tax laws.

In addition, each member agency has accomplished the following:

- The Division of Labor and Industry received 78 complaints and referred 25 of those complaints to the Task Force.
- The Division of Unemployment Insurance (UI) completed 11 UI Workplace Fraud Audits and identified 429 misclassified workers and over $2 million in unreported wages paid to employees. UI Workplace Fraud Audits resulted in $58,229 paid into the UI trust fund.
- The Comptroller has completed one joint audit with the Task Force which resulted in $7,027.44 assessed for Withholding Taxes. In addition, the Comptroller used the joint audit program to discover new revenues for Withholding Taxes. Some of the audited businesses have also been liable for other taxes due the Comptroller. In 2013, the Comptroller's Office conducted twenty-seven (27) Withholding Tax audits and issued assessments in the amount of $521,153.38.
- In Fiscal Year 2013, the Workers' Compensation Commission reviewed over 65 referrals from the Division of Labor and Industry and, the Commission reported to Task Force members two Commission findings of misclassification of workers, one of which was a "knowing" violation.

In 2012, working with stakeholder groups, industry representatives, and Task Force member agencies, the General Assembly successfully amended the Workplace Fraud Act. HB 1364 modified the list of documents an employer will be required to provide to demonstrate an employer-independent contractor relationship. The bill also clarified that the Division of Labor and Industry may, with the consent of the employer, enter a place of business or work site to review and copy records. In addition, HB 1364 restricted the Division of Labor and Industry from holding public contract funds for non-knowing workplace fraud violations without requiring a final order from a court or administrative unit. Determining the reality of the relationship between the employer and the worker is the key to finding those employers that are cheating their workers out of earned wages and benefits and cheating Maryland taxpayers by not paying their fair share of taxes. In 2013, task force members experienced a "reset" as agencies, companies and workers adjusted to changes to enforcement of the Workplace Fraud Act.

Because of the Task Force's enforcement and oversight, the Workplace Fraud Act is working and more Maryland workers can access a safety net should they lose their job or get hurt on the job. Member agencies strongly support the Workplace Fraud Act and will work with legislators, business leaders, industry representatives and community organizations to continue outreach efforts so all Maryland businesses are in compliance with the law.

I. BACKGROUND ON WORKPLACE FRAUD

A. WHAT IS EMPLOYEE MISCLASSIFICATION AND WORKPLACE FRAUD?

Many of our state and federal employment and anti-discrimination laws are based on the employer-employee relationship. Workers who are classified as "employees" receive a range of legal protections, including the right to minimum wage and overtime, the availability of anti-discrimination laws, and eligibility for unemployment insurance if they are laid off and workers' compensation if they are injured. Businesses with employees are subject to wage and hour laws; required to pay unemployment insurance taxes, social security taxes, and workers' compensation premiums for their employees; and withhold federal and state income taxes.¹

Recent Maryland and federal studies estimate that approximately 20% of employers misclassify their workers.² In 2000, a USDOL report included an estimate that 80,000 workers across the United States are entitled to benefits and are not receiving them, and that the number seems to increase when the nation's unemployment rate increases as many former employees become independent contractors.³ Some of these employers may be confused about the definition of an "employee" or may believe that their employees are true independent contractors. Other employers deliberately misclassify their employees as "independent contractors" or pay them "off-the-books" in an effort to avoid the costs and obligations associated with employees. When employers intentionally misclassify their employees in this way, they engage in workplace fraud.

² David W. Stevens, An Estimate of Maryland's Annual Net Unemployment Compensation Tax Loss from Misclassification of Covered Employees, Baltimore, Md, February 1, 2009 (estimating that approximately 20% of Maryland employers misclassify their employees); Planmatics, Inc. Independent Contractors: Prevalence and Implications for Unemployment Insurance Program, Rockville, Md, February 2000 (finding that between 10-30% of employers in nine (9) states misclassify their employees.)

³ Planmatics, Inc. Independent Contractors: Prevalence and Implications for Unemployment Insurance Program, Rockville, Md, February 2000.

Workplace Fraud negatively impacts workers, law-abiding employers, and taxpayers:

(1) Workplace fraud harms workers who lose out on workplace protections.

Misclassified employees may have no recourse if they are hurt or killed on the job, laid off, discriminated against or harassed. They are also more likely to be paid sub-minimum wages or to work in dangerous conditions.

(2) Workplace fraud unfairly disadvantages employers who play by the rules.

Responsible employers lose a competitive edge because their payroll costs are higher than employers who manipulate the system. Responsible employers also pay higher Workers' Compensation premiums and Unemployment Insurance tax on behalf of those who fail to pay.

(3) Workplace fraud deprives our communities of much-needed revenue.

It is estimated that the state loses as much as $22 million a year to the Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund due to misclassification.⁴ Millions of dollars in tax revenues are also lost to the general fund.

Misclassification has continued to receive growing attention at the state level, in part due to studies showing billions of dollars of lost revenues.⁵ In the last several years, there have been increasing efforts to combat workplace fraud on the state and federal levels. Several states including Connecticut, New Hampshire and Utah have joined New York, Massachusetts, Michigan, and Maine in establishing task forces to examine workplace fraud and coordinate enforcement efforts.⁶ Other states have introduced legislation to establish a presumption of an employment relationship such as Rhode Island, Ohio, Virginia, and North Carolina and other states specifically prohibit the purposeful misclassification of an employee as an independent contractor in a sector-specific industry such as Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maine.⁷ Even with the recent activity in several states, the National Employment Law Project has determined that “[s]tate legislation seeking to combat independent contractor abuses has dwindled since the initial spate of laws were passed in the mid-to late 2000’s, with much of the more recent activity pertaining to small provisions allowing discretionary penalties or weakening previously-enacted laws.”⁸

B. ADDRESSING THE WORKPLACE FRAUD PROBLEM IN MARYLAND

In 2009, Maryland joined approximately 33 other states that have taken measures to address the misclassification problem by passing the Workplace Fraud Act of 2009 and creating the Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud.

THE WORKPLACE FRAUD ACT

The Workplace Fraud Act (Chapter 188, Acts of 2009) (the Act) requires the different state agencies and divisions that are impacted by workplace fraud to share information when they find or suspect that misclassification has occurred.⁹ The Act, which took effect on October 1, 2009, creates violations of state law for misclassification and provides for penalties to strengthen enforcement in three areas of state law:

IMPACT ON EMPLOYMENT STANDARDS LAW¹⁰

- The WFA creates a separate violation for misclassification in the landscaping and construction industries;
- Adopts the “ABC Test” to identify legitimate independent contractors;¹¹
- Requires that employers maintain records and documentation on the independent contractors with whom they do business, and that they provide these independent contractors with a notice explaining their classification;
- Employers who “improperly misclassify” workers have 45 days to pay restitution and come into compliance with all applicable laws;
- Employers who “knowingly” misclassify their workers are subject to a civil penalty of up to $5,000 per employee;
- Creates a private right of action for workers who believe they were misclassified; and
- Contains anti-retaliation provisions for workers who complain of misclassification.

IMPACT ON UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE LAW¹²

- Keeps the existing presumption that a worker is a covered employee;

⁹ See Md. Code Ann., Lab. & Empl., § 3-901, et. seq.

¹⁰ See Md. Code Ann., Lab. & Empl., § 3-901, et. seq.

¹¹ The three prongs of the so-called “ABC test” are: (a) the individual is free from control and direction; (b) the individual is customarily engaged in an independent business of the same nature; and (c) the work is outside the usual course of business of the employer or performed outside of any place of business of the employer.

¹² See Md. Code Ann., Lab. & Empl., § 8-201, § 8-201.1.

- Keeps the 50 year-old “ABC Test” to identify legitimate independent contractors;¹³
- Employers who “knowingly” misclassify their workers are subject to a civil penalty of up to $5,000 per employee;
- Civil penalties of up to $20,000 are also available for “knowingly” advising an employer to violate the Act.

IMPACT ON WORKERS’ COMPENSATION LAW ¹⁴

- Establishes a misclassification violation and a presumption that a worker is a covered employee unless the employer proves otherwise;
- Determination of independent contractor status remains based on the common law;¹⁵
- Adds a civil penalty not to exceed $5,000 if the Workers’ Compensation Commission finds that an employer has “knowingly” violated the Act;
- Adds a civil penalty not to exceed $20,000 if the Workers’ Compensation Commission finds a person has “knowingly” advised an employer on how to violate the Act.

THE EXECUTIVE ORDER

On July 14, 2009, Governor O’Malley signed Executive Order No. 01.01.2009.09, creating a Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud.¹⁶ The Executive Order, which is modeled after those used in other states, finds that “law enforcement and regulatory efforts to combat and prevent workplace fraud have been divided historically among various agencies, reducing their efficiency and effectiveness.” The Executive Order further finds that the implementation and enforcement of the Workplace Fraud Act of 2009 “can be enhanced further and made more efficient through interagency cooperation, information sharing, and joint prosecution of serious violators.” As such, the Executive Order charges the Task Force with, among other things: facilitating referrals and information sharing related to suspected workplace fraud; engaging in collaborative enforcement; and raising awareness about the problem of workplace fraud through education and outreach.

The Task Force consists of:

¹³ See footnote 9 for a brief description of the ABC test.

¹⁴ See Md. Code Ann., Lab. & Empl., § 9-202, § 9-402.1.

¹⁵ Among factors traditionally considered by the Maryland Court of Appeals are: whether the employer has the power to hire or terminate the individual; whether the employer controls or directs the work; whether the work is part of the employer’s regular business; and the payment of wages.

 - (3) The Comptroller or the Comptroller's designee;
 - (4) The Chair of the Workers' Compensation Commission or the Chair's designee;
 - (5) The Insurance Commissioner or the Commissioner's designee;
 - (6) The Commissioner of Labor and Industry or the Commissioner's designee;
 - (7) The Assistant Secretary for Unemployment Insurance or the Assistant Secretary's designee.

The Secretary of Labor, Licensing and Regulation serves as the Task Force chair, convening the meetings and coordinating Task Force efforts. This report documents the progress and steps the Task Force has taken since its creation, accomplishments during the past year and its goals for the coming year.

II. TASK FORCE ACCOMPLISHMENTS

The principal charge of the Joint Enforcement Task Force (Task Force) is coordination and collaboration in addressing the problem of workplace fraud. Before the creation of the Task Force, agencies or divisions that discovered or suspected misclassification did not share this information with other agencies or divisions. Although various state agencies and divisions had data relevant to employee misclassification and fraud investigations, they did not share it with each other.

A. DATA SHARING

Agencies and divisions have created plans to share data and information in ways that will help them identify significant cases of workplace fraud and strengthen their enforcement efforts.

- The Workers' Compensation Commission and the Division of Unemployment Insurance executed a Memorandum of Understanding and are engaged in ongoing data exchange regarding open and closed employer accounts.

- The Division of Labor & Industry, the Division of Unemployment Insurance and the Comptroller routinely exchange information regarding suspected misclassification on state contracts.
- The Division of Unemployment Insurance executed a Memorandum of Understanding with the IRS to exchange tips and referrals regarding suspected misclassification.
- The Division of Labor and Industry, DLLR's Division of Occupational and Professional Licensing and the Maryland Home Improvement Commission (MHIC) work together to share information on the Workplace Fraud Act with MHIC and its licensees.

Worker Misclassification Database

In 2012, the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation's Office of Information Technology (OIT) worked with the Unemployment Division to acquire federal funding ($98,981) to create a database to help track cases that are referred to taskforce agencies for better enforcement. The purpose was to create a database that would be web based and enable all taskforce agencies to view its data. It would lead to data-driven audits and prevent using resources for audits that other taskforce agencies have already determined to be unproductive. Joint audits conducted by member agencies would be identified more quickly.

In 2013, the Department of Labor's Office of Information Technology developed the database in partnership with Task Force member agencies. The Worker Misclassification Database allows member agencies to collaborate on investigations, share information, and track misclassification trends. In addition, the web-based database facilitates greater coordination among agencies and divisions in terms of referrals and suspected workplace fraud as required by the Executive Order that established the Task Force. The database also made it easier for agencies to submit cases to member agencies for review. In 2014, 27 cases were entered into the database and 13 joint investigations were opened. There were five (5) joint investigations concluded; which resulted in 113 new workers discovered, $543,278.14 unreported taxable wages, and $46,076.52 unreported tax to the Trust Fund.

B. EDUCATION AND OUTREACH

Since 2009, in an effort to educate the public about workplace fraud, the changes in Maryland law and the work of the Task Force, Task Force members have participated in numerous outreach events, including the following:

- AFL-CIO Biennial Convention;
 - Carroll County Business Luncheon;
 - Commissioner of Labor & Industry's monthly construction roundtable discussions;
 - Fed/State Tax Institute Seminars (in Greenbelt, Baltimore, Easton, and Frederick);
 - Harford County Chamber of Commerce, Legislative Committee;
 - Howard County Business event on Workplace Fraud, sponsored by Delegates Bates and Miller and Senator Kittleman;
 - Maryland Association of CPAs - State Taxation Committee;
 - Maryland Chamber of Commerce;
 - Maryland National Capital Home Care Conference;
 - Maryland State Bar Association, Labor and Employment Section Annual Dinner;
 - Employer Workplace Fraud Meeting, Frederick, Maryland;
 - Maryland Workplace Fraud and Misclassification Law Meeting at Chesapeake College;
 - Maryland Workplace Fraud and Misclassification Law Meeting at Salisbury State University;
 - Stakeholder meetings to discuss legislative changes to the Workplace Fraud Act;
 - A series of training sessions held in Queenstown, Salisbury, Ocean City, and Frederick;
 - The Governor's Commission on Small Business Town Hall Meetings in Frederick and St. Mary's Counties; and
 - Maryland Home Improvement Commission training sessions.

C. PARTNERING WITH OTHER STATES

Task Force members recognize that workplace fraud is a national problem that does not stop at the state line. Applying the same principles that guide the Task Force's collaboration among different state agencies and stakeholders, the Task Force has been building partnerships with other states as a way to learn best practices, pool resources, and enhance enforcement efforts. Task Force agencies and divisions will continue to work with other states to share information and lessons learned, engage in collaborative enforcement, and increase awareness about problem of misclassification and workplace fraud.

III. TASK FORCE MEMBER REPORTS

The different state agencies and divisions that make up the Task Force are impacted differently by workplace fraud. The following summary provides an overview of Task Force member agencies' and divisions' respective efforts to combat workplace fraud and how these efforts complement the work of the Task Force.

A. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, LICENSING AND REGULATION

1. DIVISION OF LABOR AND INDUSTRY

The Maryland Division of Labor and Industry (DLI), a part of the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation, administers the enforcement of worker protection laws, including the Wage Payment and Collection law, Living Wage law, Child Labor law, Prevailing Wage law, Occupational Safety and Health law and the Workplace Fraud Act.

The Workplace Fraud Act was enacted on October 1, 2009 and became fully operational approximately one year after enactment of the law. The Workplace Fraud Unit (Unit) was established within DLI and works hand, in hand, with the other employment law programs. The Unit began active investigations in the third quarter of calendar year 2010 and is staffed with trained investigators, auditors, data analysts, a program administrator who manages the activities and an assistant attorney general who provides legal guidance and advice. Unit field staff has participated in construction site safety training; Unemployment Insurance (UI) investigative techniques training; Workplace Fraud legal training conducted by the Office of Attorney General (OAG) and ongoing intra-agency trainings. The Unit is special-funded through the Worker's Compensation Commission.

The Commissioner of DLI has statutory authority pursuant to the Workplace Fraud Act to investigate as necessary to determine compliance with the law. The statute provides the Commissioner with authority in only two industries; Construction and Landscaping. Investigators conduct audits of employers based on the Commissioner's statutory authority, by acting on complaints from individual workers or through referrals from business partners. The Unit has been successful in establishing partnerships with employers who have agreed to report suspected misclassification in the construction and landscaping industries. Partners are prohibited from filing malicious claims and can be sanctioned for such action.

After an investigation is completed, and if misclassification is found, the Unit will issue citations to employers. All citations are forwarded to Task Force member agencies and information is exchanged to ensure compliance with all applicable labor laws. The Unit is responsible for administering the law to provide misclassified workers with protections they would not otherwise be entitled such as the benefit of anti-retaliation and discrimination laws, unemployment insurance, workers' compensation, and workplace safety and health protection.

Workplace Fraud Unit Activity Report

Data below represents activity conducted between January 1, 2014 and November 30, 2014:

Number of outreach events	31
Number of persons participating in outreach events (estimated)	918
Number of Complaints Received	102
Number of Cases Opened	806
Number of Complaints referred to Task Force	20
Number of Complaints referred to UI	280
Number of Cases Open as of January 1, 2014	367
Number of Cases Closed	660
Number of Pending Cases	513
Number of Citations Issued	238
Number of Workers Affected	681
Number of Citations Issued for Non-Response	101
Amount of Penalties Collected – Misclassification	$89,535
Amount of Fines Collected	$34,890

DLI's Living Wage and Prevailing Wage units are engaged in ongoing information sharing with the Unit and Task Force member agencies regarding misclassification of employees. The Unit conducts joint audits with Task Force member agencies and has made significant progress in recouping state revenue through its referrals and data sharing. The efforts of the Unit in referring employers to Task Force member agencies have increased unreported taxable wages to UI; increased withholding tax assessments due Comptroller; expanded workers' compensation coverage to benefit more employees and reviews of insurance premiums.

In fulfillment of DLI's outreach goals, the Unit in conjunction with Task Force member agencies participated in presentations and meetings with employers, government officials, and stakeholder groups to educate the public, employers and employees about Workplace Fraud, encourage voluntary compliance, and provide a forum for discussion regarding employee misclassification.

2. DIVISION OF UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

The Division of Unemployment Insurance (UI) within the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulations is impacted in a number of ways by the misclassification of employees as independent contractors generally, and the Workplace Fraud Act of 2009 in particular.

A. U.S. Department of Labor mandated audits

For decades USDOL has mandated that the Division of Unemployment Insurance conduct audits of Maryland businesses to encourage compliance. This was true long before the passage of the Workplace Fraud Act of 2009. Before 2009, unrelated to Maryland law, USDOL required that randomly 2% of Maryland's businesses be audited for UI compliance purposes, including the review of whether employees were misclassified as independent contractors. However, in 2009, again unrelated to Maryland law, USDOL changed its audit mandate, and required UI to conduct some of its audits driven by data about where potential violators might be found. Such a strategy not only saves precious investigatory resources, but also spares those playing by the rules from the trouble of an audit.

It is important to note that in 2013, the Division of Unemployment Insurance implemented a new tax audit system to enhance its audit program; and also employed fourteen (14) new auditors to ensure further coverage of Maryland's employer community. As a result, the transition to the new tax audit system and the training of the new auditors tremendously lowered the raw numbers in 2013 and 2014. However, UI projects improved effectiveness from the additional audit staff and enhanced audit program in 2015 and in the coming years.

UI has a proven history of quality audit results. Maryland also scored the second highest in the nation in the minimum measurement scores, has the highest effective audit measure of the states that passed, and is the only state in our region (Region 2 includes Delaware, District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia) to receive a passing grade. USDOL encouraged the efforts of the division in combating misclassification of workers by awarding Maryland with a “High Performance Bonus” of $400,099 in 2014, one of four states in the nation to receive the “High Performance Bonus” this year. In addition, USDOL rated Maryland the “Highest Performing State.” USDOL’s high rating is an indication of the quality and effectiveness of the Maryland Division of Unemployment’s audit program which ensures that Maryland employers are in compliance with the Maryland UI law and report covered workers.

Year	Total DOL Mandated Audits	Data Driven DOL Audits	Total Workers Found in Mandated Audits	Taxable Wages Unreported
2009	2,810	1,608	10,265	$59,227,749
2010	2,675	1,232	10,951	$53,376,239
2011	2,094	1,514	12,668	$57,885,388
2012	1,339	1,742	11,858	$58,525,825
2013	1,348	1,120	8,469	$34,985,001
2014	1,364	1,543	6,589	$27,172,366

B. Workplace Fraud Act Audits

Since 2009, UI auditors have also worked in the context of the Workplace Fraud Act. UI auditors conduct workplace fraud audits following receipt of complaints from the general public, DLLR inter-office referrals, and due to information sharing from the Joint Enforcement Task Force and other taxing authorities related to suspected workplace fraud. In collaboration with Task Force member agencies, UI auditors perform joint audits with auditors from the Division of Labor and Industry and the Comptroller’s Office. These data driven audits are performed in industries with a history of large numbers of misclassification issues based on historical data, and on employers with disputed benefit claims resulting from workers misclassified as independent contractors. Directly below is information resulting from those audits from the last six years:

Year	UI Participation in Workplace Fraud Audits & Joint Audits	New Workers Discovered	Unreported taxable Wages	Unreported Tax to Trust Fund
2009	2	187	$1,030,791	$17,805
2010	22	1,094	$5,994,629	$347,083
2011	52	1,897	$10,092,230	$253,864
2012	27	377	$8,789,178	$128,645
2013	11	429	$2,474,593	$58,229
2014	59	1,403	$5,986,745	$256,950

C. Penalties

The Workplace Fraud Act provides penalties for knowingly violating the law. However, no employer in Maryland has been charged with penalties under the UI audit program.

B. ATTORNEY GENERAL

As Maryland's chief legal officer, the Attorney General has general charge, direction and supervision of the legal business of the state, focusing primarily on the representation of state agencies. As such, the Office of the Attorney General has provided legal guidance on all aspects of Maryland's efforts to combat workplace fraud, including: assisting with the drafting of the statute itself, including appropriate amendments; drafting regulations to implement the Workplace Fraud Act; and providing guidance as to the legality of inter-agency data and information sharing. Assistant Attorneys General who represent DLLR also attend various meetings and provide advice to the Division of Unemployment Insurance and the Division of Labor and Industry regarding implementation of the Workplace Fraud Act. The Attorney General's designee attends all Task Force workgroup meetings to provide guidance on any and all new questions that may arise regarding joint enforcement and information sharing. The Office of the Attorney General also represents the state in all litigation related to the enforcement of the Act.

C. COMPTROLLER

During 2014, the Comptroller's audit staff completed two (2) joint audits as part of the Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud which resulted in $70,188.30 assessed for Withholding Taxes. Not only has the Comptroller been able to use the joint audit program to discover new revenues for Withholding Taxes, some of the audited businesses have also been liable for other taxes due the Comptroller. In 2014, the Comptroller's Office conducted thirty-four (34) Withholding Tax audits and issued assessments in the amount of $1,893,665.01.

Also during this past calendar year, the Comptroller's Office has been able to indirectly derive a benefit from the complaints and referrals that are shared among the agencies via the Workplace Fraud online database. Many of these complaints and referrals led to additional revenue generated across other tax types that the Comptroller administers.

D. INSURANCE ADMINISTRATION

The Maryland Insurance Administration (MIA) regulates licensed insurance carriers in Maryland, including workers compensation carriers, not employers – and it is the employers who commit the acts penalized by the Workplace Fraud Act. MIA has no jurisdiction over unemployment insurance fraud; that is handled by the Department of Labor, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the Office of the Attorney General. Pursuant to the Task Force's Memorandum of Understanding, MIA shares information on companies not properly classifying its workers, with the Worker's Compensation Commission, Unemployment Insurance and the Comptroller.

Under the Insurance Article, MIA may investigate and prosecute fraudulent insurance acts, which include the making of false or fraudulent statements or representations in or with reference to an application for insurance, including misclassification of employees or under-reporting of payroll (premium avoidance fraud).¹⁷ The Insurance Article further requires that every regulated insurer file an insurance antifraud plan with the Insurance Commissioner.¹⁸

¹⁷ See Md. Code Ann., Insurance, § 27-406.

¹⁸ See Md. Code Ann., Insurance, § 27-803.

E. WORKERS' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

The Maryland Workers' Compensation Commission (the "Commission") adjudicates and resolves issues regarding entitlement to benefits to workers who have become injured as a result of disease or injury connected to their employment. The Commission has developed an enhanced Employer Compliance Program which works closely with the Worker Classification Protection Unit ("WCPU") to locate employers who are not providing the required compensation for injured workers, as well as those employers who are misclassifying workers as independent contractors to avoid paying workers' compensation premiums. In Fiscal Year 2013, the Maryland General Assembly enacted a new compliance law that further enhances the employer compliance program at the WCC. Effective October 1, 2013, non-compliant employers became subject to a fine of up to $10,000 for failure to provide compensation when ordered to do so by the Commission after a Hearing. In Fiscal Year 2014, the Commission held 61 employer compliance Hearings and assessed a total of $382,000 in penalties for failure to comply with the law. The Commission continues to focus its Employer Compliance Program on education and outreach to employers to bring them into compliance before a violation is reported or found. Through the ongoing information sharing with the Department of Labor, Licensing and Regulation, the Commission is also reaching out to employers in Maryland to provide information regarding the employers' responsibility to properly classify all workers and provide compensation for their injured workers.

IV. ADMINISTRATIVE AND LEGAL BARRIERS

DATA SHARING RESTRICTIONS. Although Task Force member agencies are required to share data among themselves and with other law enforcement authorities, the degree to which they can share this data is restricted by state and federal confidentiality requirements. For example, although the Division of Unemployment Insurance receives information on misclassification from the Internal Revenue Service, this information cannot be further shared among the partner agencies. Similarly, Task Force investigations as well as any audits conducted by member agencies/divisions are confidential. Balancing confidentiality concerns with the need to maximize data sharing potential will be an ongoing challenge for the Task Force.

POTENTIALLY INCONSISTENT DETERMINATIONS. The Workplace Fraud Act helped clarify the different legal tests that Task Force member agencies and divisions use in determining if a worker is an employee or an independent contractor. For example, the Workers' Compensation Commission uses common law to determine if a worker is an employee, while the Department of Labor Divisions of Unemployment Insurance and Labor and Industry use the three-part "ABC test." The outcome is likely to be the same because both tests focus on similar factors such as who directs and controls the work, and whether the individual has an independent business separate from the employers' usual business. Although it is possible for a worker to be correctly classified differently under the different standards, that is not common and in most cases, applying the various laws (federal and state) results in the same worker classification. The Task Force remains aware that there is always a possibility that different agencies, using different tests, may have inconsistent determinations. Therefore, agencies designated an agency official to receive final orders which improved communication with employers and made it easier for them to come into compliance with multiple agencies.

V. NEXT STEPS AND GOALS FOR 2015

■ HIGH-IMPACT ENFORCEMENT ACTIONS.

In 2015, the Task Force will continue its enforcement efforts by participating in joint enforcement actions in which representatives from Task Force member agencies and divisions visit work sites together to conduct field investigations and interview workers. In addition, the Task Force's Worker Misclassification Database continues to allow member agencies to track cases and request joint investigations which improve record keeping and data management.

■ PUBLIC OUTREACH.

In the past, the Task Force focused on educating industry groups and professionals, including employment lawyers and accountants, about misclassification and the Workplace Fraud Act. In the next year, the Task Force will continue to work with employers, employee organizations and stakeholder groups to ensure that the public is more aware of the law, its protections and available remedies. Task Force agencies will also expand its participation in Maryland Home Improvement Commission training sessions in order to educate potential and current licensees about the Workplace Fraud Act.

EXECUTIVE ORDER

The Joint Enforcement Task Force on Workplace Fraud

- WHEREAS, Workplace fraud, a business practice where employers fail to properly classify individuals as employees, is an ongoing problem;
- WHEREAS, Employers engaging in workplace fraud avoid their obligations under federal and state labor, employment, and tax laws, including laws governing minimum wage, overtime, prevailing wage, living wage, unemployment insurance, workers' compensation insurance, temporary disability insurance, wage payment, and income taxes;
- WHEREAS, Workplace fraud adversely impacts individuals, businesses, and Maryland's economy in significant ways, including: depriving workers of critical protections and benefits to which they are legally entitled; reducing compliance with employment and occupational safety standards; giving employers who fail to properly classify their employees an unfair competitive advantage over law-abiding employers; denying the State millions of dollars in tax revenues, unemployment insurance contributions, and workers' compensation premiums; and increasing the demand for social services;
- WHEREAS, Recent audits show that approximately 20% of Maryland employers misclassify employees as independent contractors;
- WHEREAS, Law enforcement and regulatory efforts to combat and prevent workplace fraud have been divided historically among various agencies, reducing their efficiency and effectiveness;
- WHEREAS, The Workplace Fraud Act of 2009, Chapter 188 of the 2009 Laws of Maryland, enhanced the ability of the State to take enforcement actions against workplace fraud violations;

- WHEREAS, These enforcement efforts can be enhanced further and made more efficient through interagency cooperation, information sharing, and joint prosecution of serious violators; and
- WHEREAS, The creation of joint task forces in other states has proven an effective mechanism for coordinating and enhancing law enforcement to address the problem of workplace fraud.
- NOW THEREFORE, I, MARTIN O'MALLEY, GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF MARYLAND, BY VIRTUE OF THE AUTHORITY VESTED IN ME BY THE CONSTITUTION AND THE LAWS OF MARYLAND, HEREBY PROCLAIM THE FOLLOWING EXECUTIVE ORDER, EFFECTIVE IMMEDIATELY:

Source: GAO analysis.

Note: There are various exceptions to the general responsibilities included in this table.

^aMost states also require payment of state income taxes.

^bEmployers are generally required to withhold taxes at a rate of 28 percent from independent contractors who do not provide, or provide incorrect, taxpayer identification numbers (this practice is known as backup withholding).

^cFor estimated tax purposes, the year is divided into four payment periods.

^dThe overall tax rates for Social Security and Medicare for 2009 are 12.4 percent and 2.9 percent of income, respectively. Social Security taxes are to be paid for earnings up to the established wage base limit ($106,800 for 2009).

^eEmployers generally are required to pay federal unemployment insurance on the first $7,000 of employee pay at a rate of 6.2 percent, which can be offset by a credit of up to 5.4 percent for timely payment of state unemployment insurance taxes, resulting in an effective rate as low as 0.8 percent. The rate is set to decrease to 6.0 percent in 2010. 26 U.S.C. §§ 3301, 3302.

^fAccording to DOL, these states are Alaska, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania.
